OUTPACE SECURITY RISK WITH STRONG FOUNDATIONAL PROGRAMS

The volume and velocity of change due to digital transformation initiatives is straining security departments like never before. Here's how you can close the gap.

Align to the business
Understand what the business values most by working with line of business leaders, finance and others to build a risk-centric security program.

18% of organizations scored high in aligning their security program to business objectives*

Know what the board wants
Learn to speak the same language. Instead of speeds and feeds, they want to know about overall security posture and outcomes related to incidents.

12% of organizations felt they were able to report solid security metrics to leadership and the board*

Employ effective data governance
Build a sustainable security program that ensures resilience between people, processes and technologies.

56% of information security and data privacy risks are business decision makers top concerns